LEADER OF HAWAIIAN BAND
FOR TWENTY-NINE YEARS

Kappelmeister Heinrich Berger Completes
Another Year of Honorable Government Service.

Kappelmeister Henry Berger, who has so long and so faithfully served the inhabitants and visitors of the Hawaiian Islands with music suited to all occasions that he is now looked upon as being as much of a public institution as the statue of the great and good King Kamehameha the First, will celebrate tomorrow, the 23d of June, the twenty-ninth anniversary of the day when he first took up the leader's baton in Hawaii.

For twenty-nine years Captain Berger has played at merry-makings and funerals, weddings, meetings and departures. Kings were crowned, ruled and died, dynasties and revolutions came and went, while, wrapped up in music and ready with tactful resource for every emergency, the band, led by Berger, played on.

It is to be hoped that the genial band-master will be allowed to round out his third decade of music before he perforce yields up the baton and the Royal Hawaiian Band, alias the Hawaiian Band, always Berger's Band, be relegated by an ungrateful and parsimonious Legislature to the past.

Captain Berger himself expresses great regret at the possible giving up of the band, not so much on his own account, but the loss of a pleasant custom, unique at all events, in American lands, that the band has inaugurated here.

"There will be many gaps in the amusement line, if the band goes. Tourists and Kamehameha alike will miss the 'Aloha Oe' that welcomed the coming and speeded the departing guest. School and public holidays will miss much of their significance if Berger's band is dispersed."

Captain Berger was not the first incumbent of musical honors in Hawaii, though in many respects he is the founder of much of the national music. He was sent to Hawaii by orders from the Prussian Government at Berlin, in response to a request for a bandmaster from the Hawaiian to the Prussian monarchy. Berger was then serving upon a Prussian man-of-war and had served his eleven years in the Prussian army, having been through three campaigns, Schleswig-Holstein, the Austrian and the French wars.

Kamehameha the Fifth was then reigning and the new bandmaster found upon his arrival that a national anthem was needed and speedily composed the popular and pretty melody of "Hawaii Ponoi," always a prime favorite with both Hawaiians and malihinis, and one of the emblems of Hawaiian royalty that still remain to the public.

Captain Berger has done much work besides building up the band from a few members to its present volume. For fifteen years he has played the organ at Kawaiahae Church without remuneration. A band was also started in the Reform School under his leadership. For five years he was the singing instructor in the public schools, organized the Kamehameha School band, still in active existence, and also an orchestra at Punahou. He has waved his baton under three kings—Kamehameha the Fifth and Lunalilo, and was bandmaster at the festivals of the merry monarch Kalakaua. Liliuokalani was ruler of his baton; through the revolution he played under no one in particular; through the Republic, and now for Uncle Sam. The soldiers of the United States have listened to and assisted at many a concert under his direction.

At all charitable concerts and affairs both secular and ecclesiastic, Berger has been to the fore. At the funerals of the rapidly diminishing native potentates Berger has paid his last respects to the monarchy that once supported him. His orchestra has supplied the musical program at practically all theatrical affairs up to a short time since, always through the use of tactful common sense and discretion remaining a popular favorite.

"Of course there have been kickers," says Captain Berger, "but I have survived the kickers, although the complaints have been coming more frequently of late. I have used my discretion in many instances where I thought the band was most needed, even when such a course meant a suspension of a public concert, and I think that I have pleased the majority."

"It is not all glory to be a bandmaster in Hawaii. People have complained that I have introduced too many white players into the band of late. It is not my fault; the natives are getting indifferent to musical matters and I have had a hard job to keep my band up to the right degree of competence. The native legislators, several of them, have scouted the idea of the girls' singing at the public concerts and there has never been any funds for them. I have had to squeeze their salaries out of the appropriation, and I am sure that they have been most popular features."

"I have to not only pay the fares of the band to Maunaloa out of my own pockets, but to pay for the electric lights used there on band nights from the same place. But I don't want to be thought a grumbler; I like to please everybody as well as I can."

Until the Republic was established, Berger and his musicians, by royal command, used to accompany the royal visits to the other Islands, often staying away for several weeks from the capital. These trips were always rewarded with extra pay. On one occasion, on a trip with Lunalilo to his country seat at Kailua, Hawaii, the whole band was away for nearly three months. The Berger band has also visited San Francisco and there won golden opinions from press and public.

In fact, Berger's Hawaiian Band has been frequently in the mouths of tourists and traveling residents of Hawaii in most of the quarters of the globe, always with approval.

The Kappelmeister will shortly reach his fifty-seventh birthday, on the 4th of August, but still retains the energy and vigor of twenty years ago. Much of the local music and many of the native airs have been preserved by the arranging and composition of Captain Berger, while their rendition by the band has gone far to popularize them.

Tomorrow, on his twenty-ninth anniversary, Berger will play at the inaugural services of the German Lutheran Church.

Captain Berger has the aloha of natives, kamaainas and newcomers alike, and the community generally will esteem it a matter of regret if he is compelled, through lack of appropriations, to lay down the work that he has so successfully and tactfully conducted for nearly thirty years.

Company on Kauai. He put in twenty-four arc lights and 250 incandescent lights, using the conduit system. The manager expressed himself as more than pleased with the work. Mr. Owens also instituted a telephone system of his own on this same plantation. He also installed electric light and telephone systems in the mills of the Honolulu, Waialua and Kekaha sugar plantations. Besides this he connected the offices of the Oahu Railway and Land Company with the wharves roundhouse and machine shops of the company. Plantation work is a specialty of Mr. Owens.

THE JOY OF THE house is the baby. No matter how many have come before, the latest arrival brings joy to all.

When the little one takes his first glimpse of the world, he is in, it is a minute of keenest joy.

Father is proud, mother is fond, brother is eager, sisters are tender, nurse is devoted; the whole human world is kind.

There is another, an under-world with enemies in it.

When baby gets into its shadow, be quick with Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil—he is sure to get into its shadow; let him get no further than into the edge of it. Health is the baby's life.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.
